Non-Spousal Primary Beneficiary

If you are married, federal law says your spouse is automatically the primary beneficiary of your 401(k) or other pension plan. You should still fill out the beneficiary form with your spouse's name, for the record. If you want to name a primary beneficiary who is someone other than your spouse, your spouse must sign a waiver.

IMPORTANT NOTE:

If you are married, your spouse is automatically your designated primary beneficiary unless you elect otherwise and your spouse consents to such election. If you are designating someone other than your spouse as a primary beneficiary, then you must complete the Beneficiary Designation Form (making such a designation online is not an option).
